SOUTH NOT WILD FOR SILVER Nebreska Man Sounds the Sentiment as Among the Delegates.

C. H. Dietrich of Hastings, Neb., who was a delegate to the Indianapolis monetary conference from the Nebraska Bankers' associa tion, has returned, after visiting various points since the close of the convention. He reports a very general attendance, the south being especially well represented.

"I talked with many of the southern rep rescotatives, and they assured me that it was a mistaken idea that the people of the south were wild for free silver. I served on the committee of resolutions, and on that committee were three representative southern men, who themselves voted for Bryan These men acsured me that the silver plank in the Chicago platform had nothing to do with the way the vote of the south was cast. It would have gone the same way by just as large a majority had the monetary plank of that platform declared for gold. The vote of the south, they assured me, was controlled by an entirely different factor— that of 'negro domination.' In subsequent talks with other delegates from the south this opinion was reiterated.

'It was the general impression that the southern and western states would be espe cially benefited by the proposed currency measure. This is especially true of the banking features, which would afford eans by which what are termed country banks could secure money to move crops with out, as is now necessary, borrowing the money from banks in the big monetary cen ters. Two-thirds of the national banking capital is now embraced in what are termed 'country banks,' and If they were allowed to issue currency against assets, it would provide all that was necessary in any emer

This would simply be delegating to the now exercised in England by the Bank of England, in France by the Bank of France and in Germany by the Imperial bank.

"The general sentiment of all the delegates, who came from every state in the union, was that business conditions were improving and that this country was on the eve of a general business revival. This was especially true of the delegates from the south and west."

President of the Omaha Live Stock Commission Company Testifies. At the morning hearing of the case wherein it is alleged that the South Omaha Live Stock exchange has been conducting its business contrary to the provisions of the interstate commerce act, testimony was given by L. Coltrin, president of the Omaha Live Stock Commission company, now out of existence. It is asserted that this company was rulned by the hostile attitude of the exchange and that the present proceedings were instituted by its former president. The testimony was watched therefore with more than the usual interest.

Mr. Coltrin began with a description of the workings of the yards and explained the conditions which were orevalent at the time conrany was founded. He said that at th he joined the exchange it was i cordance with the rules that his commany should be entitled to do business in the ex-change because of his connection with it. According to his statement his company grew whose business was being injured managed get control of the exchange and were instrumental in the passage of a new rule which required every company connected with that body to own a membership for each of its stockholders. This rule, Mr. Coltriu stated, amounted to the disbarment of his company from business, as it was' impracticable for each of the thirty members to apply for a $1,000 share, which amount it might be necessary to pay, although the market value was much less the Plan Projected. At its last regular meeting the Cenproposition to hold a national labor congress in Omaha during the exposition, and to push it to a successful issue. Considerable enthuslasm was manifested in the movement, which came up in the form of a committee report, in which the desirability of having the congress was set forth at length. The report stated that congresses of all kinds would be under the direct supervision of the Bureau of Education of the exposition, and that it was the desire of the bureau that a labor congress should be held. It would be very desirable on account of the fact that be held in Omaha during the year. The committee recommended that the congress should be so conducted that it will be tid that we were astounded when they noti- recognized as a national affair, which would give it a greater scope and magnitude. To carry this into effect it was suggested that two committees should be appointed, one to consist of local members of organized labor, o be known as the committee on ways and means and to have charge of the local, end of the enterprise, the other to be composed of prominent men of national reputation in labor circles, which should have charge of the program and the selection of speakers. It was also suggested that the congress should be held during the week beginning with Labor day, September 5, and the week could then be extensively advertised as Labor Week. The following resolution was then adopted:

COMPLAINT OF A SUFFERING CITIZEN

Charles F. Catlin Gives an Account of How He Failed to Find an Officer After Being Way-Inid and Robbed.

OMAHA, Feb. 5, 1898 .- To the Editor of The Bee: Have we any police in Omaha? comparatively few labor conventions would If so, what are they good for? These are questions of vital importance to every citizen at the present time. That we have a superabundance of police commissioners cannot be dented, and that we have a police force, such as it is, is also equally true; and that these facts alone exert a certain moral influence upon society and are a certain restraint to the commission of crime is also undoubtedly true. But viewed from a practical standpoint, in the light of recent events, and present existing conditions, they afford but little, if any, real protection to life or property, and are, therefore, virtually worthless for that purpose.

That the city is filled with thugs and thieves carnot be denied. There has scarcely been a night for weeks in which one or more Resolved. That it is the sense of the Central Labor union that a labor congress be held in Omaha in 1898 under the auspices of the Transmissis-lppi Exposition management and we pledge our aid and cooperation to the enterprise.

of our citizens have not been held up and robbed, and, in some instances, brutally beaten. We have reached a point where it is not safe for any person to be upon the streets at night alone, and where the police protection of the city is entirely inadequate protection of the city is entirely inadequate and insufficient to remedy the evil. This is indeed a deplorable condition of affairs, and one which not only reflects discredit upon the city, but demands strong, vigorous and prompt action on the part of the city author-

IS IT PURELY POLITICAL?

If our city government has become purely political machine; if the efficiency of our ire department in the protection of the vast operty interests of the city, representing of dollars in value, are depender pon and subject to the manipulation corrupt politicians, for the furtherance of personal ends; if the police force of the city are the subjects of political favoritism appointed as a reward for services render to party, or in payment of political indebt educes of those in power, without reference to their moral finess, their intellectual qualifications, or their personal experience and are, in many instances, wholly incom petent for the important and responsible Fire and Police Commissioners is to be the prostituted to such base ends; if wrangling and discord and division and strife are to continue to exist, where peace and order should reign, how on we expect anything but the lawless and deplorable condition of affairs which now threaten the life an coperty of every citizen from the hand of organized gange of thieves and outlaws which infest our city at the present time; the full extent of which the general public

On Tuesday evening last, a few minutes after 19 o'clock, while walking on Farnan street near Twenty-sixth I was waylaid by two men, who placed a revolver at my and demanded my money. Believing that discretion was the better part of valor, promptly complied with their demands, and gave them what loose money I had in my pocket, and thus escaped bodily injury. had but a few moments before walked from the Merriam hotel to Twenty-eighth and Farnam, and had seen nothing of any office n going that distance. A few minutes late. I returned over the same route, and after my encounter with the rufflans before men oned I continued down Farnam stree o Fourteenth, and from thence to the police station, where I reported the case and gave a full description of the parties. There was not an officer to be seen along the entire oute from Twenty-eighth and Farnam the police station at that hour of the night was told at the station that the beat of the officer upon that route exended up Eigh eenth to Twenty-ninth on Farnam, and that he reported at his boxes at either end of the route upon each alternate hour, so tha e must go over the route once each hour words, if the officer is always on the alert and in the full and faithful discharge f the duty assigned him, there are fifty-five ninutes of every hour when every block long the route is as entirely and absolutely unprotected by the police as a farm house on a country road, and during which time any kind of lawless depredation may mitted upon life or property without le hindrance.

If this is true upon the principal thoroughfares of the city, what must it be upon the side streets, where the police are sel-

I was told that would surely meet the officer on my return as he was due at the corner at Eighteenth and Farnam streets at 11 o'clock. I walked rom the station and reached the Merriam hotel five minutes after 11, and saw nothng of any officer along the entire route I am confident that I saw the two men who held me up on the following day at the corner of Sixteenth and Farnam streets, and made a diligent search for an officer at that time for the purpose of identification, but be seen in any direction There is evidently something radically probably escaped more fortunately than any of the others. At the police station the officer in charge said to me: "if you could look into the police court room now or any night, you yould wonder that there are not more such cases. Every bench and chair and available spot on the floor is occupied. It is literally alive with tramps, without money and out of employment." If this is true today, what may we naturally expect during the coming summer, when the city will be thronged with strangers and visitors to the exposition, all of whom will have more or less money upon their persons? What are the authorities going to do at such a time? they going to invite strangers to come to be garrotted and sand-bagged, and robbed the street, or will they take vigorou and heroic measures to purge the city these worthless characters through the systematic efforts of a strong, efficient and well-regulated police force under the guidance of a master hand and a master mind such as will afford full and ample protection to those who come among us as the city's These are indeed the important questions and problems of the hour, and upon their wise solution will depend the honor, reputation and good name of our city, CHARLES F. CATLIN.

Statement of Frank B. Johnson, OMAHA, Feb. 5 .- To the Editor of The Bee: In defense of myself, C. A. Sharp, president, and W. H. Johnson, cashier of the Midland State bank, who were charged by Judge Scott with having drawn out money on notes given by ourselves to the bank, I desire to state that neither myself, nor Charles Sharp, nor W. H. Johnson ever drew a dollar on those notes. My note and $13,000 in money were put in by me to take up old paper which was in the bank, and which the bank examiner directed us to charge off.

Will Johnson's and Sharp's notes were put in the bank to take up worthless notes which were in there. Neither one of us drew out a dollar on any of those notes, and I never drew a dollar on any of those notes, and I never drew a dollar out of there for any purpose whatever, either for services or in any other way. The old paper taken up had been put in before I had any connection with the bank.

I do not know whether it is proper for me to make a statement at this time not, but I cannot rest ander the imputation that I drew money out of that bank.

At the hearing before Judge Scott, as we denied his jurisdiction, I was not in a situation to admit his jurisdiction by putting in testimony to prove the contrary of what he affirmed, but I will prove it at the proper time and place. FRANK B. JOHNSON.

Council Inclined to Make the Necessary Provision for the Purchase of the Vehicle So Sadly Needed.

Health Commissioner Spalding and the Advisory Board will make a vigorous effort to secure an ambulance for the health department, and as the appropriation for the health fund is barely sufficient to pay the running expenses of the department, it will be necessary for the council to purchase the vehicle and pay for it out of the general fund. Some of the members of the council regard the ambulance as a necessity in view of the exposition, and although the matter had not been brought before the council so far, there is some prospect that the request from the Advisory Board will be favorably considered. Commissioner Spalding says that the ambulance is absolutely indispensable and that the cost will be slight as compared with the inconvenience and suffering that the lack of it will cause. He says that the city makes

City Attorney Connell is engaged in looking up the facts that bear on the suits that have been filed against the city by holders of special warrants. He says that there is a vast difference in the equities involved in these cases, and while some of them have a to resort to unlawful measures for the sup-pression of existing evil, and I would be loth of chairs from Baltimore has arrived and ous others in which they have neither a legal The city attorney admits that in cases in which bonds have been issued and the city has received the money for the bonds, it is legally obligated to pay the warrants. But these constitute only a part of the cases that are at issue. In others there is conclusive evidence of fraud of which the city has been a victim as well as the purchasers of the warrants. For instance some years ago the city decided to open Ohio street west of Sixteenth and for this purpose it required a small strip of land owned by a man named Kloecker. The appraised value of the land was something over $800, and on the owner's representation that it was free from incumbrance he was given a warrant for the amount. It turned out afterwards that the land was mortgaged for more than its value, and eventually the whole scheme fell through and the improvement was never consummated. In the meantime, however Kloecker had sold the warrant and the par ties who bought it are among those who ar now elamoring for their pay. Mr. Connel holds that the purchaser has no more right in the matter than the original holder of the warrant and that if he allowed himself to be victimized the city is not responsible. There are a number of cases in which frauds were perpetrated in connection with the filling of nuisance lots. The contractor received the exorbitant price of 28 cents a yard for this work and he succeeded in get-ting a number of lots condemned on account of alleged stagnant water where in fact little or no water existed. Then he proceeded to fill in the entire lot at the exor bitant price, and in most cases the facts were so plain that the tax was knocked ou in the courts. Now the people who pur-chased the warrants from the contractor want their money and the legal department ontends that the city is under no obligation to settle.
